

Circular buffers should be used when the memory is limited, or fast data insertion is important in design, or facing a huge number of processing times.

Stack should be used when we need to use recursion, a function calls itself in times until a condition is happened. Stack are also used when we need manage the memory allocation and deallocation.